What types of solar panels does Jinko offer?

Like most large PV manufacturers, Jinko offers a range of solar panels designed for residential, commercial, or utility-scale installations. They can also tailor panel designs and formats to suit specific applications if required for larger MW scale systems. The Jinko panel range comprises the following:

Which Jinko Solar panel is the most efficient?

Jinko Solar's most efficient panel, the Eagle G6, has a maximum efficiency of 23.23%, which is higher than any other residential module the CNN Underscored team reviewed. Jinko has no customer reviews with the Better Business Bureau (BBB) but carries an A+ rating from the BBB.

Are Jinko Solar panels corrosion resistant?

All the models of panels they currently sell in Australia are salt mist corrosion resistant and suitable for coastal installations across Australia. The majority of Jinko's solar panels are approved by the Clean Energy Council for the Small-scale Renewable Energy Scheme, which is Australia's home solar rebate program.

Do Jinko panels lose efficiency?

Jinko panels also lose efficiency more quickly than some competitors. Its panels degrade after the first year at 0.35% to 0.60% annually. This degradation rate is mostly in line with the industry average of 0.45%, but it means a faster loss of production and potential savings year over year.

Which Jinko Solar panels are available at Topcon?

The Eagle G6 panels are the only TopCon offering from Jinko. Jinko manufactures only one solar battery for residential use, the Eagle RS. It also makes the Eagle CS, but that battery is only available for commercial, industrial and utility-scale power storage.

Are Jinko Tiger Neo Solar panels a good choice?

I looked at many reviews of the typical offered solar panels including the more expensive higher end panels such as Sunpower, LG, etc. In the end I chose the 415W Jinko Tiger Neo panels for my 13.2kW system, because it is a very popular choice, widely used, & a very good panel for the price.
