Should you lease or rent solar panels?

Leasing or renting solar panels is an increasingly popular option for homeowners who want to take advantage of solar energy without the significant upfront costs of purchasing a system. This approach allows you to benefit from clean, renewable energy while avoiding the responsibilities of system ownership and maintenance.

Does a solar lease fit a home?

From a financial standpoint, a solar lease may fit homeowners who meet the following conditions: A solar lease also delegates system maintenance to the provider, although solar panels typically do not require much maintenance beyond regular cleaning.

How does solar leasing work?

Under this agreement, you make monthly lease payments and get full access to all solar power generated, which helps lower your utility bills. Solar leasing works best for homeowners who can't afford the high upfront costs of purchasing solar panels or the responsibility of ongoing maintenance.

Should you lease solar panels if you're moving to a new home?

Customers who choose to lease solar panels may find themselves in circumstances where they want to end their lease, such as if they are moving to a new home or they find that the lease payments plus electricity from the grid -- if their system wasn't sized properly -- end up costing them more.

Are solar panels a good investment?

Although the panels are owned by the solar lease company, the homeowner is entitled to all of the electricity that the panels produce. However, the user will also have to pay the company a monthly fee for the solar panels - so the energy savings won't be as rewarding, compared to panels bought outright.

Can you sell a solar system under a lease?

Under a solar lease, you won't own your solar system, but will still benefit from its generated electricity. A leased solar system can make selling your home more difficult because the next owner may not want to take over your lease payments. What is a solar lease?
