Does homeowners insurance cover solar panels?

Solar panel insurance coverage is included in most homeowners insurance policies, which means no separate solar panel insurance is needed. Solar energy systems and the rooftop panels or tiles are largely considered a permanent attachment to your property, similar to a patio or a security system.

Do I need insurance if I don't own solar panels?

If your insurer doesn't provide coverage or provides limited coverage for solar panels, then you may need a separate policy. As with homeowners insurance, some solar panel insurers may not cover wind or hail damage.

Do I need insurance coverage if I don't own the solar panels?

Does insurance cover roof-mounted solar panels?

Some insurers may not cover wind or hail damage to roof-mounted solar panels. If you have panels on top of a detached structure, such as a shed, it's possible the "other structures" coverage on your policy will cover them, but you should check with your insurer.

Does homeowners insurance cover rooftop solar energy?

Most rooftop solar energy systems are covered by standard homeowners policies, which doesn't change your insurance plan. However, you may need to increase the amount of coverage on your home to account for the cost of the system, which can then raise your premium. Of course, not every policy or solar energy system is the same.

Will solar panels increase my homeowners insurance premium?

You may not see an increase in your homeowners insurance premium after installing solar panels on your roof. However, you'll likely need to raise your coverage limits to account for the replacement cost of your solar panels, which will likely result in some increase to your premium.

Should I tell my insurance company if I have solar panels?

Whether you buy or lease your panels, you should always tell your insurance company that you've installed solar panels on your home. Note that if you lease your panels and insure them yourself, your insurance company may limit any claim payout for wind and hail damage since you don't own the panels.
