What is a mudroom locker?

Mudroom lockers are storage organizers that are either built-in in your home or free-standing lockers that you can spruce your hallway with. They are usually equipped with coat racks, hooks, and a shoe storage bench. If you have a lot of bulky outdoor gear and want more space, you can install your mudroom outside your house or in your garage.

Are there mudroom lockers in the arched manor?

When we purchased The Arched Manor, there were two closets in a small hallway by the garage door, but they lacked organization and it was extremely claustrophobic. We blew out the walls and created an inset where we hoped to build mudroom lockers one day (more details of that can be found in this blog post).

What makes a good mudroom locker?

An effective mudroom locker must include shoe storage to keep muddy boots and dirty shoes in place. There should be enough storage not just for your footwear but for your household members as well. Coat racks and hooks are a must to keep jackets and raincoats organized.

What muscles does a wall sit work?

It's a lower-body exercise that involves holding a seated position against a wall. What muscles does it work? The wall sit is an isometric (stationary) move that works your glutes, quads, hamstrings, abdominals and calves, says Jessica Mazzucco, CPT, a personal trainer in New York City.

What are wall sits used for?

Wall sits isolate your quadriceps muscles on the front of your thighs. Wall sits are often used for gradually building pre-season leg strength for downhill skiing, ice hockey, track and field, running, and other activities. For activities such as running that mostly work the hamstrings, strengthening the quads helps keep the leg muscles balanced.

How to organize a mudroom locker?

Assigning a hook and rack for everyone can also keep the mudroom locker neat and coordinated. Having a bench or a seating area will make removing shoes before coming into your home more convenient. A sturdy bench can help you fix your things better, especially when you just got back from a grocery run.
